Hi-tech outfit plugs into HQ

Phil Bartsch

A BRISBANE specialist in home automation and high-end electronic lighting, security and entertainment systems has paid $1.02 million to plug into an office-warehouse on the city's northside.

Electronic Living has purchased a 525sq m building at 21 Robinson Rd, Virginia, for its headquarters and a state-of-the-art showroom.

The building sits on a 771sq m industrial parcel and comprises 205sq m of office space over two levels and a column-free warehouse accessed through a container-height roller door.

Electronic Living has relocated from leased premises across the Brisbane River at the Metroplex precinct, adjacent to the Gateway Bridge at Murarrie.

Managing director Damian Cavanagh said growth had prompted the move and becoming an owner-occupier was "a far more beneficial proposition".

Mr Cavanagh said the company was constructing a cutting-edge 400sq m showroom or "experience centre".

"So fitting out somebody else's property would have been dead money."

The Virginia property appealed because it was freehold rather than strata-titled. "We can construct what we wanted rather than having to work around an existing fit out. It has worked out beautifully and we're on the doorstep of a long-established client base."

Paul Anderson from Catalyst Commercial Real Estate negotiated the sale.

Mr Anderson said it was marketed with a "soft campaign" for lease or sale.

He said he had noticed a substantial increase in demand from owner-occupiers.

"Companies in strong cash and equity positions are pouncing on properties that normally would not come up for sale."

Mr Cavanagh said many of Electronic Living's customers were corporate high-flyers who spent up to $250,000 on automation and entertainment systems.
